Medical Transcription

— “A Portable, Flexible, Federally Promoted Career for Military Spouses”

The U.S. Department of Labor has declared medical transcription to be an apprenticeship occupation. Medical transcriptionists (MTs) are specialists in medical language and healthcare documentation. Workforce development is essential to ensure that documentation experts are in place to assist the industry in transitioning to an electronic health record and to preserve the quality & integrity of future health records.

New Beginnings 2007

Graduates of selected medical transcription training programs who earn the Registered Medical Transcriptionist (RMT) credential are candidates to participate in the new federally approved Registered Apprenticeship Program. This program, sponsored by the American Association for Medical Transcription (AAMT) and the Medical Transcription Industry Association (MTIA) offers structured, on-the-job learning, and related technical instruction for qualified MTs entering the profession.

For additional information about the program visit www.mtia.com

What is an MT?

Medical transcriptionists translate from oral to written form the record of a patient's medical history, diagnosis, treatment, prognosis and outcome. Physicians and other providers employ state-of-the-art technology to dictate this information and then rely on medical transcriptionists to transform their spoken words into comprehensive records that accurately communicate clinical information.

Getting Started with a Career as a Medical Transcriptionist

Enroll in an ACCP-Approved School:

ACCP-approved schools provide state-of-the-art education enabling each MT graduate to deliver accurately transcribed documents for healthcare providers.

Scholarships:

Military Spouses may be eligible for discounts, scholarships, specialized grants, Pell grants or Sallie Mae student loans to offset the cost of tuition. Some schools also offer individual loans, payment plans and accept VA benefits, such as GI Bill.

Military spouses can find out more information about the resources available to them by contacting the educational schools at www.aamt.org/scriptcontent/mtapproved.cfm

Some military installations have local scholarship info through their Family Centers (www.militaryinstallations.dod.mil/ismart/MHF-MI/) or Workforce Investment Act funding through DoL's One-Stop Career Centers (www.milspouse.org).

Employment:

The medical transcription field is growing rapidly. Jobs are available with major medical facilities, private practices, and service providers. Many job openings are listed on government and commercial job banks and employment centers, including the Military Spouse Career Center, located at www.Military.com/Spouse. DoD and DoL, together with AAMT and MTIA, support medical transcription courses and careers for military spouses and family members.

Contact AAMT or MTIA today for complete information.
