

John Sileo

America's Top Identity Theft Educator

John Sileo spent two years of his life trying to untangle the mess he found himself in after his business partner stole his identity and embezzled $300,000 from their clients. Faced with serious legal, financial and credit problems, his business was ruined and the stress of it all nearly destroyed his marriage.

Today, Mr. Sileo is president of The Sileo Group (an idea lab focused on guiding organizations on privacy protection) and the country's leading speaker on identity theft. His award-winning book, Stolen Lives: Identity Theft Prevention Made Simple, has helped countless Americans avoid the nation's fastest growing crime.

Like his book, Mr. Sileo's presentations are based on his experience as a victim of identity theft and everything he learned as he fought to regain his identity, his credit and his life. He engages and inspires, teaching participants how thinking like a spy can help them stay vigilant against would-be identity thieves.

Mr. Sileo's presentations have earned rave reviews at companies of all sizes, universities, associations and financial institutions. He is regularly featured as a leading identity theft expert on television news programs. A Harvard University graduate, he lives at the foot of the Rocky Mountains with his wife and two daughters.
