Thirty years ago, the Military Child Care Act of 1989 became a model for the nation in how we care for our children – from increased funding and training programs to creating curricula and addressing affordability. Today, the transformation continues, with the Department of Defense leading the way.