

The following established style guidelines reflect the long-standing practices of developers and editors of content for the Voluntary Education Program. They are consistent with the rules and guidance outlined in The Associated Press Stylebook and reflective of Office of Military Community and Family Policy style and usage preferences.

Content Tips

- Pay attention to the overall organization and flow of an article. Information and ideas should be logically organized, and there should be some sense of continuity or flow from one idea to the next.
- Avoid redundancy.
- Write in neutral language that includes all groups, except if otherwise appropriate.
- Use language that represents all services.
- Write in relationship-neutral terms, such as “partner” or “couple.”
- Flesh out and clarify statements and ideas.
- Ensure that subheads reflect the content of the following text.
- Focus on the positive side of content as much as possible.
- Keep the wide audience range in mind.
- “Less is more” — be concise.
- Use bulleted formatting for clarity when appropriate.
- Use direct links whenever possible. Voluntary Education articles should use primary sources or link to primary sources whenever possible.
- Refer to or represent all services for each example, photo or link.
- Keep excess wording and information to a minimum.

Things to Avoid

- Do not refer to Voluntary Education students in relationship to K-12 and college education students.
- Do not refer only to service members with spouses and children — include single service members when possible.
- Do not make assumptions.
- Do not tell people how they feel.
- Do not tell people what they should/need to/must/ought/can’t/won’t do.

- Do not tell people what they always/never do.
