

Key Message

Military children experience many challenges as they relocate to new schools due to a parent's change in duty station. By establishing statewide Purple Star Schools programs, states can encourage local education agencies to implement practices that assist military children with transitions/deployments and also recognize military service and civic responsibility.

Analysis

- Military-connected children often experience difficulties as a result of parents being on deployment or constantly on the move. The average school-aged, military-connected child will attend six to nine schools from kindergarten through 12th grade.
- Issues related to school transition have become a top priority for families and some schools. Mobile military students face challenges such as gaps and overlaps in curriculum, differing graduation requirements and course-placement disruption.
- These students also face social and emotional challenges that include leaving supportive friends and activities to start over at a new school.
